The Rainbow of the Garden

By Christine Cornelius

The name Iris has its origins in Greek mythology - "Iris" is the goddess of the rainbow with golden wings. She is a messenger and traveled along the rainbow to deliver messages to the ancient gods. Irises had a great impact on the temples in Egypt - they have sculptures and drawings of irises on the walls. Louis the VII of France saw irises on one his journeys and they inspired him. He then carved the fleur-de-lis in his coat of arms, which is considered the symbol of strength and valor.

Now you can get a wide variety of Irises in all colors of the rainbow. We have new varieties in Bearded and Siberian types for 2015.

Try German Iris Hello Darkness, or Dangerous Moods in the dry/full sun areas of the garden. Pink Parfait, Imperial Opal, and Blue Bird are some of the new double Siberian Irises for the full sun/ moist spots in the garden.

PINEBERRY

The pineberry (Aloha Berry) is a white fleshed, red seeded strawberry that tastes like fresh pineapple! It's a great choice for a fresh fruit salad or a smoothie. Although this unusual berry is new to us at Parkland, it has been around for centuries. Brought back from the brink of extinction by a company call Vitalberry in the Netherlands, this berry originated in South America's Chilean region and was crossed with the North American strawberry. Pineberries are much smaller than the strawberries and are unique in their coloring. The aroma and flavour of pineberries is truly amazing.

Growing Information :

"Pineberry plants are grown just like regular strawberries, with one distinct difference. In order to produce the largest possible crop of the distinct white fruits, it is necessary to have a pollinator strawberry in close proximity. For every four plants, it is best to have one regular strawberry plant for pollination purposes." (Information taken from Strawberry Plants.org)

AVAILABLE AT

Indoor Vegetable Gardening

BY TRUDY WATT

Growing your own food has become an expanding area of interest for many of our customers and we are often asked..."Can I grow vegetables indoors?"

There are some vegetables that would be perfectly happy in a bright window, however, there are other varieties that are better suited to being outside. Below is a list of factors to consider before choosing what to grow inside.

LIGHT: Lack of light is one of the most limiting factors to plant growth. In order to meet the basic requirements you will need at least an east, west or south facing window. Supplemental lighting can be added in the form of grow lights which provide the full spectrum of light needed for optimum plant development. Incandescent lights are not suitable as they only provide a narrow range of light rays and can become hot.

Vegetable and herb plants should receive at least 12-14 hours of bright sunlight each day for optimal results.

TEMPERATURE: Not all plants grow well in the same temperature range; some plants require constantly warm temperatures and others do better with cool nights and warm days. Vegetables like peas, beans, broccoli, and cabbage prefer to be outside where there are wide temperature fluctuations between night and day. Tomatoes, peppers, and salad greens will do just fine with indoor temperatures.

SOIL: Whether you are seeding or already transplanting into bigger pots a well-drained potting soil is essential. Garden soil is not suitable for indoor gardening as it compacts and is too heavy for potted plants. It may also contain weed seeds, insects and be a source of plant disease. A peat based growing medium usually labeled as "potting soil" will work well for herbs and vegetables alike.

FERTILIZER: Vegetables in the garden often have a readily available source of nutrients from the surrounding soil. Any plants that are grown indoors will need to be fertilized with water-soluble fertilizers and/or soil amendments. We suggest looking for a fertilizer that is suitable for vegetables and tomatoes: for best results, fertilize weekly at the recommended rate listed on the container.

Many fertilizers are available in organic form and we would be happy to make a recommendation!

WATERING: Ideally rainwater (or snowmelt) is best for plants, however, if you have good quality tap water that will suffice. Water your plants thoroughly every time and let the soil dry slightly between waterings.

Growing your own vegetables can be a rewarding and tasty experience. As you gain experience with indoor gardening, you may want to experiment with various herbs and even citrus plants!

Enjoy The Company of Family & Friends Around A Fire Feature

By Serena Zwicker

The smell of roasting marshmallows and the sounds of wood crackling as it burns are comforting and soothing impressions for many people. It is possible to create this kind of atmosphere in your landscape by following a few basic steps.

First, you need to determine if you want a permanent or moveable fire feature. While moveable fire features, such as fire tables, do not have as many restrictions it is still important to check into any regulations that may apply. A fire table can still provide beauty and interest when your landscape simply cannot support a permanent fixture. They can be just as attractive while being more flexible with the amount of space required.

In-ground or permanent fire features have restrictions as to the distance they must be from combustible structures so it is very important to find out what these regulations are in your community prior to installation.

Whether you are planning for a moveable or permanent fire feature you will still want to create a cozy setting. Adding shrubs and perennials will soften the edges of your space and will create the ambience that your family is looking for. Having the right amount of space around the fire feature is important. A permanent fire feature should have a 15' diameter area around it to accommodate seating. Be sure plants are not going to overwhelm the space; when creating your fire feature keep in mind that overhead structures or tree branches should not interfere. This allows your family to be safe and secure in your landscape.

Whatever your choice please remember to check on what restrictions apply in your area. For more information or advice please contact Parkland Garden Centre at 403-346-5613.

We Value What You Value

THE LOWLY LOVELY SPUD

by Alfred Prins

Potatoes have been grown for centuries and are still one of the most common vegetables grown today. A member of the same plant family as: tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, tobacco, datura, petunias, goji berries and more, they are amongst the easiest of vegetables to grow. They can be grown in any sunny garden with a well drained loam of average nutrient value. They grow equally well in raised beds, large pots or in our potato bags. They do not like shady spots, hot dry locations or heavy, soggy soil.

“Netted Gems” (now known as “Russett Burbank”), “Norland”, and Warba were the only varieties available in days gone by but now there are so many more different kinds available. At Parkland Nurseries & Garden Centre we will have over 25 varieties to choose from, beginning with the old stand-bys mentioned above and including all the shapes, colors and textures anyone could imagine. They come with russet, red, white, yellow or purple skins and inside they range from white through buttery yellow to red and blue; including 5 varieties new to us.

While potatoes can be planted as early as mid April, they are best planted in early to mid May. Early maturing potatoes such as Warba, planted in mid April, can sometimes yield “new” potatoes by late June, while potatoes planted as late as early to mid July can yield the same tasty treats in mid September. Potatoes left in the ground to properly mature until late September or early October will store the best.

If you have problems with scabby potatoes we have resistant varieties to help solve that problem. Come in and check them out!

A New Look in our Seed Racks!

by Alfred Prins

We always carry a very wide selection of garden seeds but this year we have made some exciting changes. We have had so many requests for untreated organic seeds, heritage seeds and non-GMO seeds that we have sourced some of the best herb, flower, and vegetable seeds to meet this demand!

This year we have seed selections from Renee's Garden and Seed Savers Exchange for our Central Alberta gardening friends. We have hand-picked our selection from their offerings to suit our shorter, cooler growing season. This gives us the best ever selection of "safe" seed for "safe gardening", in our sometimes challenging climate.

Much of this selection is exclusive to Parkland Nurseries & Garden Centre in Central Alberta. "You can only get 'em here"! Come on in and tempt yourself!
